Locals win bus route survey

CAMPAIGNERS have won their fight for a survey on diverting the 178 bus in Kidbrooke.

Residents and businesses were backed by the council, Eltham MP Clive Efford and London Assembly member Len Duvall in their demands for a rethink on the route.

Transport for London has now launched a consultation on proposals to extend the route into local roads at Kidbrooke. And it is seeking locals' views in an online survey which runs until March 20. The 178 currently runs along Kidbrooke Park Road in both directions.

This means that local people living in and close to the new Kidbrooke Village development have to change buses or have a long walk to the nearest 178 bus stop.

LETTERS

Heartfelt thanks to ambulance crews

WOULD just like to send a massive and heartfelt thank you to the three paramedics who attended my husband when he fell ill on February 10.

I'm afraid I did not take the name of the first chap, who arrived by car I believe, after I had rung the emergency services. He very quickly established that my husband was indeed having a heart attack and explained to us what would happen next.

The two paramedics in the ambulance arrived very shortly afterwards, their names were Jake and Pete. The care and professionalism shown by these men was amazing. They are a credit to the NHS. I dearly hope that someone who knows these guys sees this letter and lets them know how grateful myself and my family are.

My husband is recovering in hospital and hopefully will be home in the next few days. Thank you again.

Fiona Hamilton, Plumstead

Stop parking outside the old police station

IS it possible for the council to do something about the cars that park outside the old police station at the cross roads on Shooters Hill?

They have a very good car park, yet they park in Shooters Hill from early evening and at weekends. This causes all the traffic, coming down the hill to go to the outside lane, thus making the traffic back up all the way up over the hill.

R.A.Driver.

● A council spokesperson said: "A Transport for London red route controls the junction and frontage of the old police station. But a section of Shooters Hill eastward and up the hill is a borough road.

The north side has double yellow lines while the south side has no effective waiting restriction. Parking is permitted outside of the bus lane hours and therefore available for use by residents of the old police station.

The council regularly reviews parking, waiting and loading needs and the effectiveness of the bus lanes. After April 2016 the council will review the parking requirements here and its effect on the capacity of the road approaching the Well Hall Lane traffic signals.

Princess Anne awards charity's heroes

HER Royal Highness The Princess Royal presented awards to seven staff, supporters and volunteers of a community charity when she made a special visit to the Greenwich Peninsula last Tuesday (February 23).

Princess Anne is patron of the Livability charity, which moved its national offices to Mitre Passage recently after 20 years in Shoreditch. It holds the awards ceremony every year, with winners nominated by their peers as people who go the extra mile for their work and service. The princess also unveiled a plaque.

The evening was also attended by Greenwich Mayor Norman Adams, and the Deputy Lieutenant of Greenwich, Dr Pieter Van Der Merwe. Cllr Adams said: 'It's a privilege welcome the Princess Royal to Royal Greenwich. I'm delighted that Greenwich Peninsula has been a location of choice for Livability's national office team, and that the step-free accessibility of the area is beneficial to the charity's service users and staff.'

Livability is a national disability and community engagement charity that delivers community projects, disability care services and training resources that promote inclusion and wellbeing.

Tribute for dedicated tenants' rep

A FUNERAL service has been held for Desmond Steadman, widely regarded as a true pillar of the community.

Mr Steadman, a former electrician who died aged 91, spent many years devoting his time and efforts to Burrage Road, Woolwich, making it a better place for everyone to live. He was a tenants' rep of longstanding, and became Chair of the Gill Court Tenants' and Residents' Association – and was still doing the job when he was in his 80s.

Cllr John Fahy, the council's deputy leader, said: "Desmond had lots of energy, and genuinely wanted to put his efforts into the community and in helping people. He came over from Dominica in his 20s and was one of those people who would always go along to housing panel meetings to make a contribution. His death is a sad loss to the community."

TfL consultation launched

The proposal is to divert the bus route off Kidbrooke Park Road into Moorhead Way where the bus would turn back on itself and travel south before diverting onto Tudway Road where it would turn back on itself returning onto Kidbrooke Park Road.

It means local people could join or leave the 178 in those roads and have a direct service to and from Lewisham and the Queen Elizabeth Hospital in Woolwich. However, through passengers on that part of the route would have longer journey times.

Council leader Denise Hyland said: "We have worked hard to get TfL to consider local concerns about the 178 route and welcome this consultation. I urge residents to give their views so that we can get the best possible service which meets the needs of as many people as possible."

Abbey Wood regeneration plans

Last month passengers using Southeastern services began travelling into London from a brand new platform – the first part of the new station to be brought into use.

The new platform is wider and provides better cover and lighting, and new customer information screens.

When the development is completed at the end of 2017, the station will boast a new larger ticket hall, new platforms for both Crossrail and North Kent services and six lifts providing step-free access to all platforms. The station will also feature better security and customer information systems.

Once operational, the Crossrail line to be known as the Elizabeth line, will see up to 12 extra trains an hour allowing passengers to travel right through central London without having to change trains, reducing journey times across the capital.

The arrival of Crossrail in Abbey Wood is helping to spearhead a huge regeneration project in Abbey Wood that will see new homes, services and opportunities brought to the local area.

Plans to improve Wilton Road are part of a joint regeneration project between the royal borough and neighbouring Bexley. The project was awarded £150,000 from the London Mayor's High Street Fund and £150,000 in match funding from the two boroughs. Wilton Road is home to several local shops and businesses and has potential to be more of a hub. The two councils are also working with housing association Peabody to launch 3,000 new homes over the next 10 years.

A brand new library in Abbey Wood has also been approved by the council as part of the ambitious Cross Quarter development – a multi-million pound regeneration project for the local area. The plans will see an attractive and modern facility created with the potential to attract as many as 100,000 visitors per year.

Council leader Denise Hyland who is also an Abbey Wood ward member said:

ACTION STATION: design plans for the Crossrail station

"The new platform to the station at Abbey Wood is great news as passengers are now benefitting from better and improved facilities. It is also part of the development that will see Crossrail operating from Abbey Wood in 2018, which will prove a real game changer for the area and local people."

Cllr Danny Thorpe, the council's cabinet member for regeneration and transport, added: "The council is committed to maximising the potential of Crossrail and delivering an ambitious regeneration project that will see brand new homes, amenities and services brought to the local area."

Help for youth who self harm

DON'T suffer in silence is the plea from the council, local schools and youth clubs who are uniting as part World Self Injury Awareness Day today (March 1).

They are highlighting support and advice services which help young people facing emotional difficulties or mental health issues. Royal borough youth hubs will be running sessions throughout March outlining support services and encouraging those who might be concerned for themselves, or for their friends, to seek help.

Nicky Pace, chair of Greenwich Children's Safeguarding Board, said: "It is concerning that so many young people are using self-harm as a way to deal with difficulties and that many are suffering in silence. Through this campaign we aim to make them aware that there is help available, that they can access a range of resources online or contact local and national agencies to receive the support they need."

Cllr Miranda Williams, the council's cabinet member for children's services said: "We are committed to safeguarding and supporting young people who face mental health issues. The issues around self-injury are often complex and can be isolating to those affected. Together we are promoting the support available to ensure young people do not suffer in silence and receive the help they deserve."

New industrial units for Nathan Way

TWENTY two new industrial units are to be built at Nathan Way industrial estate in Thamesmead.

They were given the go-ahead by Greenwich Council as part of plans to attract investment and create jobs for local people. The plan aims to support business growth in order to retain and develop existing businesses and encourage new ones into the borough. The Nathan Way scheme meets demand for modern, high quality industrial space in the borough. The new units will accommodate existing businesses that need to expand or relocate – as well as new businesses looking to locate into the borough. Transport links to the new estate will improve massively when Crossrail stations at Woolwich and Abbey Wood open in 2018. Councillor Sizwe James, cabinet member for business and skills, said: "The borough is going through an exciting period of regeneration and redevelopment. It is vital that we put in the facilities and infrastructure that will ensure our existing businesses can operate and flourish, and so that we continue to attract new businesses to the borough." The site will create 95 jobs during the construction, including five apprenticeships and could safeguard 80 jobs and provide over 50 additional jobs as a result of business growth and new business start-ups.

Tenants inspect estate's energy saving facelift

SEVENTY years after it was built, the Barnfield estate in Plumstead has had a major re-fit to bring it up to 21st century standards of thermal and energy efficiency.

The £13 million investment has included new insulation, and replacing and upgrading roofs, lighting, windows and heating systems to make the homes warmer and cheaper to run.

And last week the estate was held up as a beacon of how fuel poverty can be tackled at a Warm Homes event organised by the council.

Visitors had the chance to see the improvements for themselves on tours of the refurbished homes and were able to chat to residents about the difference it had made to their lives – and their fuel bills.

Last Wednesday's event was supported by the national fuel poverty charity, National Energy Action, and aimed to get people talking about – and tackling – the energy issues they may face.

Deputy council leader Cllr John Fahy went along to meet residents and see the changes that have been made at the 1945-built estate, which has over 600 dwellings and has suffered from poor energy efficiency, dampness, and mould.

He said: "This £13 million rejuvenation is a great example of our Greenwich Homes Standard, which ensures that council-owned homes are warm, decent and deliver savings on fuel bills."

He added: "Latest government figures say an estimated nine per cent of households in Greenwich are living in fuel poverty. The council wants to change this, and is committed to tackling fuel poverty and energy issues."

As well as encouraging residents to reduce energy bills – for example, by taking part in the Big London Energy Switch to find the cheapest gas and electricity suppliers – the council aims to boost household incomes and improve the energy efficiency of homes.

There was free advice from an 'energy café' including information on the energy technologies including solar PV panels and district energy networks.

Visitors could sell their bikes or buy affordable secondhand models at a pop-up bicycle market, while workshops gave people the chance to learn about community gardening, encouraging people to grow and eat their own food to help to keep their grocery bills down, and bike maintenance.

The scheme, delivered by Charlton Athletic Community Trust, offers eligible residents useful advice on keeping warm as well as advice keeping fuel bills down, the flu jab, and keeping active and healthy in the winter months.

Additionally, it offers an energy efficiency assessment, a benefit check and a free room thermometer to keep an eye on the temperature in your home.

Residents who are over 60, caring for a young or vulnerable person or having problems paying their winter fuel bills may be able to benefit.

People with mental health problems, learning disabilities, and physical or sensory impairments are also encouraged to contact the service.

Cllr David Gardner, the council's cabinet member for health, social care and public health, said: "Local people concerned about keeping warm in the coming weeks are urged to contact the service for support. # Testing the water

Meter roll out starts in Royal Greenwich

HOUSEHOLDS in Greenwich will be among the first in the capital to save water, energy and money as Thames Water starts a roll-out of smart meters.

All households are due to be connected to smart meters by 2030 as part of a plan to safeguard water resources for the future after a government directive. Thames Water says population growth and climate change has put pressure on water resources and smart meter technology will put customers in control and encourage efficient use of water.

The meters are linked to a wireless network and data collected automatically, so customers will be able to monitor their actual use online and get accurate bills. Residents will also be able to call Thames Water for an update on their water use.

Households with smart meters will get further support to help them save water, energy and money through a free 'Smarter Home Visit.' It's a chance to have the latest water-saving devices fitted and get expert advice on how to reduce their water and energy use. After the meter has been activated, households have two years before they are moved on to a metered bill, unless they choose to switch early.

Research suggests customers on meters use 12% less water while smart meters can be used to detect a leak says the water authority.

Danny Leamon, Thames Water's head of metering said: "Population growth and climate change will put huge pressure on our already stretched water

Recycling comes full cycle

GETTING A HANDLE: buyers check out the refurbished cycles for sale

RE-CYCLING took on a new meaning for pupils at Eglinton Primary School in Woolwich when they held a secondhand bicycle sale.

Children took 20 unwanted bikes into school and the junior travel ambassadors helped repair them to get them ready to sell after school. They were joined by a team from Peddle My Wheels, a company that holds pop-up sales of re-conditioned bicycles.

By the end of the day only five unsold bikes remained.

"The day was a positive step towards the idea of recycling our old bicycles at Eglinton and keeping ourselves fit and healthy," said a school spokeswoman.

"This is great news for the children that are able to buy a really good bike for a great price."

Funding boost for Greenwich volunteer centre

The money will fund a project to increase

"The number of people coming forward to volunteer is increasing and so is the demand from local organisations – this project will help us provide the training and information to make sure we are offering volunteers a good quality experience," said volunteers centre chief executive Michelle Martin.

Creating a cleaner environment

THE council is using new powers to seize vehicles they suspect may be involved in illegal dumping of waste. In previous years they would have had to go to court for a forfeiture order.

Last year the council received more than 14,000 reports of fly-tipping involving 730 tonnes of waste which cost £210,000 to collect and get rid of.

It is illegal to dump waste and the courts can impose fines of up to £50,000 or more, or a prison sentence of up to five years.

Jobs, training and adult learning

INVESTMENT will support adult and community learning along with employment schemes to help local unemployed people train to get back into work. These include Greenwich Local Labour and Business, the borough's jobs and training agency and HILL (Highways Improvement and Local Labour), the highways improvement scheme which offers young unemployed people the chance to learn new skills.

Attracting visitors

THE ROYAL borough has become the fastest growing destination for tourists in London- and tourism is set to increase by a further 28 per cent by 2018.

The figures, published by the council's tourism company Visit Greenwich, showed that more than £500,000 a year is ploughed back into growing the local visitor economy, creating new jobs and opportunities.

Events such as the Greenwich Festivals, held each summer, and the Tall Ships Festival, planned for 2017, play an important part in putting Greenwich on the map and attracting visitors. Greenwich will see major investment in 2017 when London's first cruise terminal opens at Enderby Wharf; Crossrail stations are due to open in Woolwich and Abbey Wood in 2018; and plans for a new cultural and heritage centre at the Royal Arsenal in Woolwich are progressing.

Helping domestic

THE COUNCIL remains committed to helping victims of domestic violence and it will have invested in support victims and help.

Services come under Domestic Violence and with a range of part-time support.

They include the violence intervention Plumstead police station, an emergency response support.

The Her Centre in Newham provides support for women with free and confidential counselling, advocacy and support as emergency housing for victims. Contact Greenwich Violence and Abuse Helpline on 020 8273 8273 or visit www.greenwich.gov.uk/domesticabuse ing the local economy. Programmes to support victims of domestic abuse and take action against the perpetrators will continue as will funding for the Police's Violent and Organised Crime Unit (VOCU) which is helping tackle gang-related crime.

Part of the increase in the council tax follows a call by the Chancellor for local authorities to make a two per cent ring-fenced charge to pay for adult social care. Greenwich councillors agreed that the need for children's social care was also increasing and applied a further increase to pay for these services.

The rise is set against the backdrop of a four-year savings programme which includes reducing staff costs by £20 million, creating new efficiencies.

Council leader Cllr Denise Hyland said the council's priority remained the protection and support for local people hardest hit by funding cuts.

"We have drawn up a strong four-year programme of savings aimed at protecting frontline services and supporting our most vulnerable residents," she said.

Caring for all ages

THE council offers a wide range of adult social care services aimed at supporting people who are vulnerable, giving them greater choice and control in their lives.

Even where people don't qualify for direct care services, we can help signpost people to the most suitable care for themselves or their families. Support for carers is also a high priority.

With more people living to a greater age, Greenwich – like other local councils – has to plan ahead to meet the rising cost of providing such services. The council works closely with GPs and other local health professionals to ensure that care and health services are properly coordinated – and we'll help people to be cared for at home wherever possible reducing the pressure on hospital beds. The council has also launched a community directory with details of social care, health and well being services at www.greenwichcommunitydirectory.org.uk

Accessing services online

MORE services are being added to the website each month to help residents and businesses report problems, apply for services or pay bills at a time convenient to them. Local residents and businesses now expect to be able to access services and payments online and it helps the council to keep costs down.

The website had over 1m hits in January 2016, and 46% of visitors to the website are using mobile phones or tablet devices. Latest online developments include live webcasting of monthly council meetings, and online bookings for tennis courts and football pitches.

Tackling gang-related crime

THE police's Violent and Organised Crime unit (VOCU), set up to target gang-related crime in the borough, will continue to be supported by the council to ensure it can continue with its vital work.

In 2015 the unit seized over £100,700 in cash, drugs with a street value of almost £50,000 and officers made 214 arrests. Thirty-four offensive weapons were also taken off the streets.

SCENE

THE inspiring story of a group of miners from Northumberland who became acclaimed artists is the latest production from Eltham's Bob Hope Theatre.

The Pitmen Painters is the true story about the Ashington Group who, in the 1930s, joined an art appreciation class in the evenings after a day down the pits.

They started painting - often portraying their working life - as a way of helping them to understand the art they were studying.

The group eventually became known as artists in their own right, and were invited to exhibit at venues in northern England.

Their admirers were said to include artist Graham Sutherland and sculptor Henry Moore, and their collection is now housed in a permanent centre near their village.

The Ashington Group's story was turned into a play by Lee Hall, who created Billy Elliott. First performed in Lee's native Newcastle upon Tyne in 2008, The Pitmen Painters has since met with critical acclaim at the National Theatre in London and on Broadway, New York.

Director Sheila Arden said she visited the Ashington gallery with two cast members, Alan Cummings and Kai Corsack, to see the paintings for themselves and to talk to the archivist.

Describing it as a "heart-warming, funny and thought-provoking play", Sheila said: "As a group we have had a wonderful time at rehearsals learning not only about the characters but the

Peninsula on canvas

AN artistic interpretation of the future of Greenwich Peninsula has been designed for a new exhibition opening this week.

Entitled Where Pioneers Live, it has been devised by the London-based Made Thought studio to express the spirit and vision of the developing area.

Ben Parker, the studio's creative director, said it would also reflect "the energy its founding communities will create and ignite".

"Each section has been imagined to convey with a unique feel of each neighbourhood in a surprising and interactive manner together recreating the urban buzz that we expect to become the everyday life here on the Peninsula," he said.

Where Pioneers Live opens at the NOW Gallery in Peninsula Square on Thursday, March 3 and runs until May 16. Entry is free.

The gallery invites artists and other creatives to design installations for its space - for more details visit www.nowgallery.co.uk

Swimmers splash out for Sport Relief

POOLSIDE PARTY: swimmers celebrate after the challenge, inset, Cllr Denise Scott-McDonald with disability athlete Joseph Peciuch

LEISURE centre managers and users are pooling their resources to raise £1/2m for Sport Relief.

The royal borough's leisure provider Better is aiming to raise £500,000 for the charity and is hosting a range of fundraising activities for all ages this month.

It all started last week with the Corporate Sport Relief Swimming Challenge which involved leisure managers and staff.

The team is swimming 31 miles in 31 Better-run pools in six days and popped into the Waterfront Leisure Centre last Thursday as part of the challenge.

Cllr Denise Scott-McDonald, the royal borough's cabinet member for culture, creative industries and community wellbeing was there to cheer on the team which included disability athletes Joseph Peciuch and Simon Randerson.

Local people can join in a range of further sporting events in Royal Greenwich.

Planned activities include a Fitness-Athon at the Waterfront Leisure Centre, a family sports day at Sutcliffe Park, a Badminton-Athon at the Warehouse Sports and Performing Arts Centre, and a sports auction at Coldharbour Leisure Centre.

Tomorrow (March 2) three swimmers from Greenwich - Shane Davies, Stuart Barr and Mikael Kiviniemi - will be swimming 22 miles the length of the Channel tunnel to raise money for Sport Relief. Their challenge takes place at Charlton Lido from 9am to 6pm - and local residents are encouraged to come down and show their support.

Sam Wright partnership manager for Greenwich said: "This is just one of a number of Sport Relief fundraising activities we are running this year ranging from family sports days to mass fitness challenges. We have given ourselves a huge half a million pound target to reach, so we're calling on everyone in the local community to get involved and join #TeamBetter."

● For the full list of activities please visit www.better.org.uk/sportrelief or call in to your local Better leisure centre.

Experience the 'power'

IT'S a 2pm kick off for an open day hosted by the Greenwich Powerchair Football Club this Saturday (March 5).

The event has been organised to encourage people to go along and find out what the game is all about and everyone's welcome to the event at the Waterfront Leisure Centre in Woolwich High Road between 2-5pm.

The club is part of the South London Special League, which provides disabled people with the chance to improve their lives by taking part in competitive sport. It was founded 12 years ago by Sharon Brokenshire MBE, who explained: "Powerchair Football is four-a-side, with games of 20 minutes each way. It's great for people with restricted mobility. It's a fantastic, adrenaline-fuelled game of football using battery-powered wheelchairs, and you can play at all levels."

The club is funded by Children in Need and charity reps are due to visit the club at The Waterfront on Thursday afternoon ahead of the open day.

"Saturday's event aims to encourage new members, so come along and watch what we do. We encourage kids aged from 10 to 18, but we don't turn over-18s away. Any age can play each other."

The club trains at the Waterfront on Thursday evenings and Saturday afternoons.
